A few years ago a group of undergraduates started a student club, the Political Science Student Organization at the University of Washington, also known as PSSO. The purpose of the club is “to promote student and faculty involvement and cooperation in the Political Science Department through student run and organized events, socials, and activities.”

This meeting is to launch the club for the 2017-18 academic year. Any student can join, and there are no fees or eligibility requirements to participate. Attend to learn more, especially if you would like to be an officer.
