Dr. Robert Sutter, George Washington University
Monday, November 19, 2018 - 4:00pm to 6:00pm
William H. Gates Hall room 138

Is a new Cold War between China and the United States becoming the reality? Under the Trump Administration, China-U.S. relations is deteriorating at a rapid state. Recent policies and behaviors on both sides have created an enormously destructive dynamic in the relationship. It is time for us to reevaluate some of the heated debates in both countries' policy arena today: Are Chinese and American national interests fundamentally incompatible? How did China-U.S. relations get to the current mode of confrontation?

We are honored to have Dr. Robert Sutter, one of the nation’s leading analysts and historians on China-US relations to give a lecture on the origins, evolution, and implication of America’s whole of government opposition to China’s challenges.

Prof. Don Hellmann and Prof. David Bachman from Henry Jackson School will serve as discussants.
