ENGLISH 200 A - LITERATURE OF THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST

submitted by Toni Kwong on July 11, 2018 - 11:16am

“Literature of the Pacific Northwest

MTWTh 9:40-11:30
101 Pamsey Hall
It you are still looking for a B-term class, there’s still room in ENGL 200 A, Literature of the Pacific Northwest. It’s interesting, region-specific reading; assignments are creative and personal; and classes emphasize discussion and inquiry. Email mcallow@uw.edu if you have questions.

In this course we will explore literature written in or about the Pacific Northwest, including long and short fiction, essays, and poetry. Through our readings and discussions, we will explore various themes and determine if they help us understand the “literature of the Northwest,” or if the region’s literature defies categorization. Watch for one thematic focus of the course, an important feature of so much of the region’s culture—setting, place, and landscape.