WEEK OF FEBRUARY 4, 2019

Department of Political Science Bulletin, February 4, 2019

Holiday reminder: The University will be closed on Monday, February 18, for the George Washington's Birthday (Presidents' Day) holiday.

FACULTY AND GRADUATE STUDENTS PAPERS, PUBLICATIONS AND ACTIVITIES:

Nothing particularly interesting happened to Tony Gill this week, but he did create conference posters for his upcoming presentations at ASREC and the Public Choice Society's annual happenings. These works of art are viewable on his office door.

Scott Lemieux has published a couple of pieces this week. First, in City and State: “The High Stakes of NYC's U.S. Supreme Court Gun Control Case.” https://www.cityandstateny.com/articles/opinion/commentary/nyc-supreme-court-gun-control-case.html

POLITICAL SCIENCE TALKS/SEMINARS:

Winter Political Science Faculty Panel with James Long, Susan Whiting, and John Wilkerson: “Corruption in Comparative Perspective”. Wednesday, February 6, 5:30–7:00pm, Gowen Hall room 201. Coordinated by Pi Sigma Alpha. The event is free but, given the limited seating capacity, the audience will need to reserve their seats here.

The Harry Bridges Center for Labor Studies, as part of the Labor Studies Workshare Series, presents Mathieu Dubeau and Riddhi Mehta-Neugebauer (PhD Candidates, UW Political Science), “Academia’s Promise: Upward Mobility or Elite Revolving Door?” on Friday, February 8, 12:30–2:00pm, Smith Hall, Room 40-A. The paper will be circulated to the attendees a week in advance of the workshare. Participants are expected to read the paper before the meeting and be prepared for a discussion. Please feel free to bring your lunch. Coffee and cookies will be served. To register for the workshare and receive the paper, please e-mail hbcls@uw.edu.
